(...)The invention generally relates to a device and method for cleaning a pipe or other tubular element and more particularly, to a device and method for cleaning periodic foreign matter from a pipe without damaging the pipe. For example, in the manufacture of semiconductor integrated circuits, it is well known to clean the surfaces of semiconductor wafers with ultra pure chemicals to remove the foreign matter thereon. Typically, a semiconductor wafer is first placed into a bath of cleaning liquid and ultrasonic energy is directed at the bath to clean the surface of the wafer. The cleaning liquid is a solution of chemicals, water and surfactants that are commonly called a cleaning solution. To maintain high quality semiconductor products, it is necessary to prevent the wafers from coming into contact with the environment. In particular, the cleaning solution should not be allowed to enter the environment, as it could contaminate other materials. Thus, the surrounding environment must be isolated from the cleaning liquid. For example, it is known to use a manifold to provide a clean environment for the wafers and a shower head to direct a fluid stream against the wafer.

Typically, a pipe is secured to the manifold to carry the cleaning solution from the manifold to the shower head. The pipe also forms a hermetic seal so that the cleaning solution is isolated from the surrounding environment. The shower head is positioned over the pipe to direct a fluid stream against the wafer. The fluid stream is directed away from the pipe to prevent the cleaning solution in the pipe from entering the environment. Although the conventional system works well in many applications, the fluid stream may occasionally become
