The Google Cast is a new service from Google. It is designed for easy and secure sharing of content between connected devices. With Google Cast you can stream to any Chromecast-enabled device or send the content to any other screen. Connect your PC or Android device to the same WiFi network and start casting. Just a year ago, Google introduced Google Cast for Android, an app that allowed for easy streaming of media and other applications over the Internet. The hardware known as Google Chromecast arrived on the scene at the same time. This new "stick" TV dongle required no external device, thanks to a special TV tuner, a network router and a YouTube account. It was, however, designed to work only with Android devices. To date, Google Cast has grown from a gimmick to a product in its own right. It's now possible to stream content over the Internet to Chromecast and other Google Cast-enabled devices. The latest update to Google's Cast app for iOS devices lets you send content to the dongle wirelessly, a nice convenience and one that's missing from Apple's AirPlay. Like AirPlay, Cast also lets you send content from one device to multiple devices. The new version of Cast lets you cast from any app that supports casting from an iOS device. If the app has the iAds banner in the bottom right, it will support casting. This means that you can now cast content in apps like Spotify, Netflix, Hulu Plus, and the iAds banner. The analog TV app is one of the apps that supports casting, but you can't cast it via the new app. If you haven't tried Cast in the last year, now is the time. The main thing you should know about the new Cast update is the fact that you can cast from any app, not just the one that is displayed on the iPhone when it's connected to a TV. The app also has a new homescreen widget that lets you quickly cast content from your home screen. Cast's new homescreen widget is great for quickly casting content from apps that don't have the Cast button on their apps. The new homescreen widget shows you a grid of popular apps and media content on the same page. Just tap an app and you can instantly cast that app to your TV. It's not quite as intuitive as the new Cast update

The above mentioned steps were very informative. Chromecast is a brilliant device which is very easy to set up and easy to use. Chromecast allows you to cast media from your PC to your TV, allowing you to view content on a larger display. It is great for when you have lots of different apps on your computer and you want to be able to cast the content you are currently viewing to the TV. I found it to be a very simple app to install and use. The only downside is that it requires a Chrome browser on the computer and the Chromecast device. The reviews are almost as good as the application. The best part of this application is that it works with both Windows and Mac. The only downside is that the Mac app doesn't work with the iOS version of the application. I was given a quick course on how to set this up, and it was very easy to do. The App for PC does not work with the Mac version, so if you are using the Mac version, your only option is to use a Chromecast device. Overall, I am very pleased with the application. It is very easy to set up and use. I can cast my PC to the TV and view my PC from the TV. The support has been very helpful. I have had no problems with it. Chromecast is an amazing device, providing a super simple and awesome streaming experience. I just don't know how I lived without it. I would recommend this to anyone who is looking for a simple to use, yet revolutionary streaming solution. It is a great technology and it is best to use it for what it was made for. If you need to stream video, music or anything else to the television, use Chromecast. I have been using Chromecast for a while, mainly for internet streaming. So far, I am very impressed with the quality, the simplicity and the cost. Chromecast has come a long way since its humble beginnings and it is still going strong. What can I say? I am pretty sure that this product has a bright future ahead of it. I have used chromecast to show all sorts of things from my PC to my iPhone to the big screen - TV, Apple TV and Chromecast. The apps that use this technology are quite varied, but in my opinion the ones that are best are the ones that can do what the device does best - stream media to your TV. The best part is, you can do this with almost any device on your network, from a laptop, to an Xbox, a computer, a tablet, an iPhone and everything else, and it is all very easy to set up.
