Info Description Airac Cycle 1805 is a third-party multiplayer racing game based on the simu-car franchise. It features an arcade mode, a Time Trial mode, and a championship mode. The developers of the game are Prodrive. Airac Cycle 1805 is set in an alternate universe of the simu-car series. It involves four different game modes: Lap Race, Time Trial, Championship and Arcade, each with its own features. Lap Race is a time-trial race against AI-based competitors. Time Trial is a competitive racing game where races are split into smaller more tactical races. In Championship, the player picks a team of drivers that must compete in a 20- race season to make it to the top. Arcade Mode is the game modes most similar to previous simu-car titles, and it involves competing against the computer in a race.

Gameplay In Lap Race mode, players select a track and then race against the computer, or other players. The race can be replayed as many times as desired with optional handicaps and other factors in order to make it easier. In Time Trial, players race against the clock, competing in 2, 5, or 10 minute races. In Championship, the player creates a team from a pool of drivers with their own car, team and sponsor, and they then compete in a 20-race season. There is a big prize at the end of the season for the driver who performs best. In Arcade Mode, the player races against the computer in a single race. Arcade Mode is the closest game to simu-car titles, but the game is lacking in features. Verdict With Arcade Mode and Time Trial, Airac Cycle 1805 has the strongest game modes of any simu-car title available. The two other modes are arcade games, rather than real simu-car titles. The developers of the game have claimed that this is because they wanted the game to make use of the features of the A320 and the corresponding P3D version of the game. While the pace of the game is not as fast as the simu-car titles, it can be enjoyable for those that enjoy simu-car racing. Taking a photo at sunset in Mexico?
