The two-fold increase in methamphetamine lab incidents in Santa Clara County over two years is indicative of the community's increasingly desperate efforts to maintain public order when dealing with the drug. In the first four months of this year alone, there were 54 laboratory incidents that resulted in 12 arrests and the seizure of 9,282 grams of methamphetamine, about $193,000 in cash and a number of weapons, the county said. County officials said the rise in methamphetamine lab seizures is alarming and indicates that drug cartels are making methamphetamine on a larger scale, and they are using more sophisticated techniques to launder the drug and get rid of it. In the first 11 months of 2016, there were 50 lab incidents, resulting in 10 arrests and a seizure of about 15,000 grams of meth. By contrast, in the same period last year, there were 18 incidents, 12 arrests and 3,367 grams of meth. Ten labs were seized during the first four months of this year, compared to just four in the same period last year. “It’s clear that the criminal element has absolutely no respect for the rule of law,” said Supervisor Dave Cortese. “The more labs we find the greater the chances that we will find more guns and drugs, and the more likely that dangerous, life-threatening chemicals will be used in the manufacture of meth.”

Unfortunately, it appears that meth is turning up in increasingly unlikely places. Last year, a 25-year-old Madera man, identified as Paolo Fabio Cruz, was convicted of killing a 16-year-old girl during a shooting at the public swimming pool in Burlingame. At his trial, prosecutors had offered Cruz $1 million to plead guilty, but the defense declined the offer. Palo Alto police recently found a meth lab with active ingredients in a public park. They discovered five boxes of pseudoephedrine, 500 grams of iodine, 14.5 grams of lithium, a gram scale, a coffeepot, a coffee pot and nearly $3,200 in cash. The lab was in a clearing in the woods and had apparently been going on for at least a year. On the front page of the county's online newsletter, a January story on meth in the county concludes with the message "Drugs may be turning up in places you would least expect them." Over the past few years, methamphetamine
