Q: How to convert JSON to CSV which is faster and how to get one particular field Currently, I am using a java application which has json object and i need to convert it to csv. But it is taking a lot of time to do the conversion. Is there any way by which I can convert json objects to csv without converting into java object and getting the values? I have also tried the csvtools but i need to get a particular field value. Can it be possible? A: NPOI is a great tool for this, and also is a known supporter of java. I would recommend converting your JSON to a POJO first using GSON. It will be faster in terms of performance, and easier to manipulate with other programs, such as Excel and the likes. Q: How to use $group in mongodb aggregate query I want to group by url and place all the document in one place. Could you please help me to solve the query. I want to show the title, details and so on in another display page like the image below. A: Use $group query and get array of type(I presume it will be list of document array) of type BSONDocument. Refer to the document for details on the syntax: //Assuming you have type of BSONDocument, I have assumed so here let aggregate = db.collection.aggregate( [ { $group: {
