Opens the definition widget in a new browser window Shows definition in a popup window Local Definitions (on the server): Download the definitions from the Dict Service directly to the registry Synchronizes your additions, updates, and removals to and from the Dict Service Remote Definitions (on the internet): Download definitions directly to the registry via the Web Service No connection to the internet is needed The definitions are obtained by querying the Dict Service for the most recent update. Operating system support: Windows, Linux, and MacOSX Installation, settings, and usage: Download and install the dictionary definition files (Windows and Mac OS X) or the definition data (Linux). Note that these definitions can be overwritten if they are updated. However, the definitions will never be removed as long as the definitions directory is in the dictionary root. The DictGadget settings are under Options | Dictionary. By default, definitions are downloaded from the DictService and imported when restarting DictGadget. You may change this to modify your own definitions or to use one of the supplied remote definitions instead. A list of available definitions is shown when you first launch DictGadget. If your definition directory is located in a non-standard place, you can specify this. The default location is in the location of the shortcut DictGadget_settings. Quit DictGadget and reopen to have the definitions appear. Additional functionality: Size: DictGadget supports size definitions. They can be loaded, accessed, and deleted in all ways. Have Fun! DictGadget X64 (Updated 2022)

-------------------- This is a tool for searching definitions on the web! The SideBarGadget is a simple desktop application that connects to the DictService web service to bring definitions to your desktop. The DictGadget does not provide any definitions, nor does it make any modifications to the original dictionary it is working against. The SideBarGadget makes a simple HTTP connection to the service's defined URL and gets a description of the word you're trying to define or lookup. 1. The SideBarGadget connects to the DictService URL and sends the phrase "what is the word" 2. The SideBarGadget waits for a reply from the DictService service and then sends the reply 3. The SideBarGadget parses the returned data 4. The SideBarGadget builds a list of definitions and returns them to you in the form of a dialog box 3. The SideBarGadget finishes and opens up the definition dialog with all the definitions found. 4. The DictGadget is disabled 6. The DictGadget is re-enabled 7. The SideBarGadget is restarted You can use the SideBarGadget to provide a definition for a single word or for many words at once! Having definitions connected directly to your desktop is a very handy tool! The DictGadget can be used to provide a word's definition when a word is typed or a selection of words is selected from the SideBarGadget. The DictGadget can be used to search the web for definitions on a single word or many words at once! The DictGadget is designed to be used with a mouse click and not your keyboard, so be sure to use a mouse with the DictGadget! Languages Releases Component Updates Available for: Windows, Mac, iOS, Android, Linux Customer reviews Excellent, easy to use, reliable I've been using this software for years, on every Windows and Mac computer I've been on. It's mostly a one-button-click thing. The latest version really extends the functionality and the quality. The newer version is extremely easy to use and does not even require you to register. With the new version it's easy to have the definitions and definitions history listed in a list
