The Canadian military says 18 Canadian Forces members were taken to a U.S. military hospital after a military aircraft crashed in British Columbia's Interior. The military statement didn't say which aircraft crashed. But a U.S. official confirmed that it was an American transport aircraft operated by the U.S. military's Honour Guard. The Canadian Forces said that the accident occurred about 90 minutes after Canadian Forces members boarded the plane at a detachment in Chilliwack, B.C., near Vancouver. There were 15 passengers and three crew members on board, according to the U.S. official. Canada's Department of National Defence says 18 people were injured and the plane was secured on a hard base. The officials weren't authorized to discuss the details of the accident before they were made public. U.S. National Transportation Safety Board spokesman Terry Williams said the Canadian military hadn't sent any information about the crash, and he could not discuss the cause of the crash because of the ongoing investigation. Q: If the US military uses ATM style money or not I'm sure for most of you this is an obvious question but I had the need to ask it anyway. My reasoning is that most likely you would use currency to buy something at a military base, just like you do at the mall. My question is what to do if the currency is in your pocket and you need to buy something, and say, the coins are regular US pennies, but its not in your pocket. Would you just have to have the store give you the exact change, or would you have Mozilla Firefox is one of the most well known web browsers in the world. Built with the current web technologies, such as HTML5, CSS3, and JavaScript, Firefox is the most commonly used web browser.
