Original soundtrack featuring over 40 original songs. Inventive battle system with great strategic and tactical choices! A big beautiful town, large enough to explore freely yet small enough to follow the story of your friends and rivals! Explore and enjoy the colorful town life, meet characters with their own unique backstories! Witness the story of the new magistrate of Nakamachi in a traditional Japanese style! A big gorgeous world, charming characters, and strategy gameplay: the classic detective case with a modern twist! Embark on a spectacular adventure to clear up the riddles of Nakamachi! Recommended for beginners Full of richly textured scenery, this is a rewarding detective game, with a cast of great characters, a mystery of an old-fashioned murder, and plenty of story. A detective job where you have the responsibility of upholding the law, and doing your best to find the truth The large cast of characters and colorful world of Nakamachi are a true joy to explore and the mystery and intricacies of this town are many and deeply-rooted. All mysteries are more than a case of murder — they're about the city, its history and its people. At the centre of the story is the relationship between Shimei and Kawai, a tragic love that is brought to life by the game and the illustrations. The age-old Japanese tradition of cherry blossoms is one of the beauty of this game and plays an important role in the story. The game keeps you captivated with a variety of interesting choices in investigation and with a plot that just keeps you guessing. The very attractive game world and the wide range of choices in the game give the game a very deep depth and allow for a lot of replayability. I am interested in the history of Christianity in the Middle East (also speaking about the early church in Egypt, Judea, and Galilee), and have had a notion of trying to learn some Greek. The problem is, every course I've seen on the net is concerned with the New Testament. Thoughts? What would be the best courses to study in order to cover a good portion of the textual history of this region? A: You want to study the "Indo-Graeco-Roman world" - not just the Greeks and Romans, but the Jews who lived in Roman provinces, or served them as Hellenists or Hellenized Jews. Most of the major Jewish texts can be read with at least partial Greek, and so can much of the Christian Literature. You need to know the Greek language - mostly inscriptions, and literary texts such as Josephus, Philo, and a lot of the apologetics you will find in the early church fathers. Your best bet is to find an intensive course with an instructor who knows the region and its texts well. The New Testament Greek Course at Harvard has a good curriculum. I've

Fancy Trangram VR on the way (A) A canned-up version of this show was screened several years ago (A+), but I haven't seen VR reviews or tributes to it yet, so it seems like the perfect time to formally introduce it. It's a VR review of a 1984 film by Neil LaBute, and it uses phrenology and transcendental meditation as its main devices to explore the conflict between alcoholism and the need for creative expression. As you can tell from the poster, it's one of the few films I've done about phrenology, which I discussed in that issue's article about the development of the Criterion catalog. I'm going to have to check out my copy of the A+ version to see if it includes a copy of this clip, as I'm pretty sure I screened this with a rough version. There have been VR releases of two other LaBute films so far, one in collaboration with Chilling Tales in 2014 (an adaptation of his stage play, with no relation) and the other done by Joel Borgstedt, since it was produced in San Francisco a few years ago. (B) When I was doing (A+), I pitched the VR version to Apsaras and they were very interested. I could also do a version for Netflix, which is what I did, but the VR version is, I think, going to be much more potent in terms of marketing. (C) After that, I found out about the VR film journal Jaywalker, and I talked to them about doing my similarly failed VR film, Journey of the Western Flyer. They said that it would have to be a much smaller version than the multi-Oculus Rift edition of (A). Well, I have some time to think about this, and I would love to hear your thoughts about what the final version of Fancy Trangram would be like, particularly if you think it would help its profile a bit. (D) I was planning on just putting a version up on a film website, but by delaying this for so long, I think it might be much more effective to showcase it in VR spaces. Two of the biggest as-yet VR cinema venues where I have connections are the Samsung venue at the Sundance Film Festival and San Francisco's VRCinem

The Plus Point is a simple game designed to teach you an important addition skill called "summation". As you will also see, the goal of this game is to get the highest possible score during the game. When a sum is requested, it is divided up in such a way that one can be combined with a generated combination of numbers that will arrive at the right answer. Of course, the tricky thing about addition is that it is always possible to get the right sum, but with different numbers. Have fun! This is a fun puzzle game that will help you train your brain to solve mathematical problems in a fun and not so simple way. As time flies, I would like to present this game to you. In this game, you will be given a sum that you will have to solve. The sums will be generated as a combination of given numbers. You can make the games as hard or as easy as you want, but make sure you make it hard because you will have to train your brain to be more fast to answer the equations in the same way that you would solve addition problems in real life. There are three different difficulty settings to the game. Easy: The game is easy to solve. Medium: Solving the game will be a little harder but it will take less time. Hard: The game becomes a bit tricky. Have fun solving the equations! Currently, there are 123 equations to solve and you can check them all out in the Helpers section of the game. You can also post your high scores in the High Score section of the game and also check out a video tutorial. If you like this puzzle game, feel free to subscribe and like. You can also check out my other puzzle games like "Hipster", "Code", or "Game of Code". This game was made in the frame of the BWC2018 Computer Science Fair held at the Austrian Institute of Technology (ASIA). You need to repair a block of buildings by clicking on the correct piece to connect it to the correct building. A red flag will warn you if you click the wrong piece, or if the road is blocked. You can only connect the blocks to blocks that are adjacent, but you can connect only the top two rows of block. Also, the two blocks need to form a connected path on the path. Make sure that you put all the block rows together in order.
