This game the player combats a large number of enemies by shooting at them Player control a fighter shoot down all the enemies fighter and all the enemy to win the game. FEATURES: Original game layout, with very dynamic battle system A huge number of missions to play, each is different, and all the game will never be the same1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to telecommunications, and, in particular, to systems, methods, and graphical user interfaces for managing service provisioning, such as establishing, modifying, and terminating billing information. 2. Description of Related Art An individual customer typically will have multiple telecommunications service providers (e.g., wireless carriers, Internet Service Providers, and others) for which the customer has a service account (e.g., a phone number, email address, or other service account identifier) and an individual billing account (e.g., for cellular services, data services, other services). The number of service providers with whom the customer may have service accounts and/or billing accounts is increasing. Additionally, the number of services that may be provided to the customer via an account may increase as well. For example, an account may have multiple access point names to provide voice and data services to the customer. As another example, a single account may have multiple email addresses (i.e., from one to one million), wherein each email address may have its own account with a different wireless carrier. The number of service providers with which the customer may have service accounts and/or billing accounts, and the number of services that may be provided to the customer via an account, increases the complexity of the customer's relationship with the service providers. In order to efficiently manage this increase in complexity, more tools for managing service provisioning are required. In particular, there is a need for a system that allows the customer to manage one or more service accounts and/or billing accounts without having to work through cumbersome interfaces and with very little chance of confusing a user. Accordingly, there is a need for systems, methods, and graphical user interfaces (GUIs) for providing service provisioning. and 30 years of age) as young as 15. Terraforming Earth is a BBC television documentary series about the process of terraforming the planet Earth. Each episode, led by renowned astrophysicist and author Neil DeGrasse Tyson, explores a different stage in the process. The series was commissioned to be shown in conjunction with the Turnstyle festival, where the main focus was on the period following the implementation of the first phase of terraforming - the removal of most of the stratospheric ozone layer using hydrogen peroxide aerosols. The first episode, "The Sky's the Limit, Part 1: Ozone Depletion" aired in the US on 29 October, UK on 18 December, and Australia on 9 January 2004. The final episode, "The Sky's the Limit, Part 16: Terraforming Final Frontier", aired in the US on 29 April, UK on 30 January, and Australia on 19 April 2004. In the UK, the series was broadcast weekly on Thursdays from 30 January to 12 March. Although most of the episodes were shot in the US, the first two episodes were produced in Seattle, Washington, UK. They show footage of the EAFP (Extraordinary Alien Form Possibilities) Project, whose goal was to visualize what the
