The technology ensures players are able to make exceptional reactions and decisions while in the match's most challenging situations. It also detects and corrects for player movement on the pitch based on the player's physical motion data, giving them freedom to become more fluid and to express their creativity. Players will now be able to run, change direction, perform a 180-degree turn, and run and turn or change direction in one smooth motion. Lead game designer Colin Thorne said, "The new 'HyperMotion' technology allows us to do things we've never been able to do before. Never has FIFA been this fluid - players can run, turn, and change direction in a way that feels more real than ever before. It's also more playable and more enjoyable to play." Intuitive and Responsive Controls - FIFA 22 is now designed and optimized for the new, console-first, handheld-first approach to play. Based on in-depth feedback from this new experience, FIFA 22's controls have been reworked to offer gamers the most enjoyable, intuitive and responsive gameplay experience ever, focusing on speed, precision and reaction. For the first time, the controls are optimized for both console and PC, incorporating a more robust hand and stick motion controls system, improved controls for coaches, and changes to the player model and its motion capture technology. The Pickaxe - The Pickaxe is a new mechanic that allows players to call for the ball even if a pass or dribble is blocked in the small space between defenders. Players need to use the Pickaxe to win the ball back from a block, by pushing off the defender's foot, and then quickly execute a shot to turn the ball to goal. The Pickaxe is available in open play and from set pieces, and can be used through out the game, both in possession and as a quick-pass option. Role-Based Team Play Soccer returns to its fundamental characteristics that fans have identified as being true to the sport. An entire team works together to advance the ball into the final third and score the goal. This team play takes a back seat to the free-flowing, skillful movements of individual players that provide entertainment throughout the match. Pace of Play Fast paced gameplay with an emphasis on speed and intensity is the new standard in FIFA. PACE OF PLAY is a new scoring system that rewards dynamic, attack-minded play.
