What is Football? Football is a sport that originated in England in the 19th century. The sport is played by two teams (called elevens) which line up in a rectangular field with a goal at each end. The main method of scoring points is via the "kick-and-rush" technique of scoring points: a player runs with the ball from their own half of the field to the opposite end of the field, then kicks the ball (through the opponent's defensive line of players). The opposing goalkeeper defends the other end of the field, just like in the traditional version of soccer. The position of the goalkeeper's goal line is dictated by the laws of the game. To score a goal, a player dribbles the ball past the goalkeeper and then kicks it into the goal. The first team to score a goal wins the game. The oldest competition in the world is called the British Football Association Challenge Cup. The first edition of the cup was held in November 1872 and the final was held in March 1873. The winner of the cup goes through to the FA Cup Final. In 1901, the trophy was renamed FA Cup and it is the oldest national football cup in the world.
