The present invention relates to an inverted signal receiver for use in such a system as an automobile radar apparatus for detecting a vehicle traveling ahead on a road with a radar wave having a relatively wide range. FIG. 1 illustrates a prior art arrangement of a radar apparatus. In FIG. 1, the prior art arrangement includes a transmitter antenna 10 and a receiver antenna 20 for transmitting and receiving a radar wave which is applied to the transmitted antenna 10 and detected by the receiver antenna 20. The apparatus further includes a signal processing circuit 30 for processing the output signals of the receiver antenna 20. An antenna 40 for applying a reflected wave from a vehicle is connected to the receiver antenna 20 and the output of the receiver antenna 20 is fed through a matching circuit 50 and then applied to the signal processing circuit 30. The radar apparatus of the above described arrangement has a problem of auto oscillation in which the oscillation of the receiver antenna 20 is resonated with the output of the transmitter antenna 10 when an automobile is present at a range around 200 to 300 meters (60.3 to 91.4 feet) ahead of the vehicle. FIG. 2A shows the above described circuit in the auto oscillation state. The resonance of the oscillation of the output of the transmitter antenna 10 reaches the receiver antenna 20 at a maximum power level. FIG. 2B shows the example of the received output of the receiver antenna 20 when the auto oscillation is not controlled. As apparent from the waveform of FIG. 2B, the received signal level in the receiver antenna 20 is reduced at a distance of less than 200 meters (60.3 feet). At a distance greater than 200 meters (60.3 feet), it is necessary to apply a sufficient level of driving voltage to the receiver antenna 20 so as to maintain the received signal level at a prescribed level. FIG. 3 shows the effect of the received level of the receiver antenna 20 to the detection of a vehicle traveling ahead by the apparatus of FIG. 2. The control of the received level is explained hereinafter with reference to FIG. 2B. When the auto oscillation is not controlled in the state of FIG. 2A, the signal level of the receiver antenna 20 drops off as the vehicle approaches in the neighborhood of the maximum level as shown in FIG. 2B. The level of the received signal is detected at a level corresponding to the received level at a distance of 150 meters (46.7 feet). Accordingly, the vehicle traveling ahead is detected at a distance of 150 meters (
