- And more

Description: Beautifully hand-drawn and designed, the free-to-play puzzle game comes with over 50 levels with more to be released in May. Play through the challenges of each world, as you draw lines to connect 2 orbs of the same colour. The object is to create lines as few as possible in order to reveal the path to the exit.

Description: More than just a beautiful game for your iPad, Japan Asia Magazine describes the game as "The most delightful and easy to play puzzle game ever created"

Pear Crack+ [32|64bit]

The main gateway to the information superhighway so far is the web browser. You probably have a preferred one right now, and chances are you're not really using all of its features. As a lightweight alternative, Pear Crack Mac wants to provide simple means of going online to visit your favorite web pages. Slim, common browser design Before you can actually enjoy anything the application has to offer, you need to make sure that .NET Framework is installed on your PC, even though modern Windows iterations include it in the default feature pack. The visual design is clean, and intuitive, although the upper toolbar feels a little rough in terms of aesthetics. Jumping to a page is done through regular means, by simply writing down the target URL, but note that hitting "Enter" has no effect, so you need to interact with the "Go" button following the URL field. A little underprepared for modern content Back, and forth controls make it possible to navigate through content easier, with the possibility to refresh at the press of a button. Moreover, a built-in search system helps you look up info of interest on Google. Sadly, there's no way to select a different search provider. Unfortunately, the application doesn't really fair well with modern types of content, such as HTML5, or even some types of multimedia files. Sure enough, it's light set of features has a decent impact on system resources, but it's also devoid of some popular, and pretty useful ones, such as tabbed navigation, history tracker, or favorites manager. Making it your default web browser needs to be done through Windows features, with no dedicated option here. Although there's no tab support, multiple instances of the application can be launched as an alternative. Laser-induced fluorescence measurements of plasma sputter yields of copper. A new laser-induced fluorescence technique for measuring copper sputter yields from oxygen plasma in air ambient conditions has been developed and tested. The technique allows the measurement of the copper sputter yield with a gas mixture of oxygen and nitrogen. After sputtering a copper film a copper fluorescence line of Cu<sup>2+</sup> is used to detect the copper component of the sputtered material. The fluorescence line intensity is used for the absolute quantification of the copper sputter yield. The advantage of this technique is the avoidance of copper contamination in the chamber. In contrast to sputter rates from the chamber walls, the laser-induced fluorescence method provides reliable results even on ultra-thin samples without degradation of the morphology. The copper sputter yield from oxygen plasma in air ambient conditions has been measured as a function of pressure, ion fluence and temperature. Experimental values for the overall copper sputter yield and sputtering yields of copper ions (Cu<sup>2+</sup> and Cu<sup>3+</sup>) are determined.

Q: How to find minimum among 4 list whose total=100 List 1: 9,10 List 2:3,20 List 3:4,23 List 4:6,18 Find minimum among these list whose total=100 A: Like this? var sum = List1.Aggregate(0, (a, b) => a + b); var min = List.Min(p => p.Total == 100? p.Value : 0); or even simpler: var min = List1.Aggregate(0, (a, b) => a + b).Total == 100?
