It is not known whether the illicit drug use rate in China and in the other three Asian countries is similar. This study aims to compare the rates of illicit drug use in three Asian countries. In this study, we applied a standardized World Mental Health Survey questionnaire (WMHS) to 78,438 adults in China, the Philippines and Thailand (total of 75,082 respondents), and another questionnaire was used to obtain information on illicit drug use from 18,411 students in China. The response rate was 63.4% for the adults and 83.1% for the students. Overall, the rate of any illicit drug use in the three Asian countries was 15.1% among adults and 4.0% among students. The rate of cannabis use and cannabis-induced psychotic disorder was highest in China, followed by the Philippines and then Thailand. In contrast, the rate of heroin use, morphine use and injecting drug use was highest in Thailand.
